Chapter 1 by Jack Frost

It's been eight thousand years since the war began.

Angels, and demons had a code that they all followed. Never kill. If one disobeyed this code they would be sent to the deepest parts of hell, and one you could not escape. One did, and his name was Vincent Tempes.

He was the most powerful demon in all of hell. He fell in love with a beautiful angel called Anna. When Vincent escaped he made a promise to Anna that they would start a family together. And they did they had a healthy baby boy they named Alec. When Anna gave birth to him she died.

But before she did she made Vincent promise to take care of Alec, and to give him a normal life. He promised, and took him away from anything that had to do with Angels, or Demons. He took him to a place called Manhattan. And this is where his story starts.

Chapter 2 by R

Alec Tempes had an incredibly boring life. He wished he didn't. Wished so badly to claim that something interesting happened to him. The only thing that set him apart from anyone else was the fact his mom was dead, and it was the only thing he could brag about.

"Magnus, it's so great to see you. How's death been treating you?"

The two of them were normal looking people, a girl with braided blonde hair and a boy who looked like her with shaggy blonde hair the same shade. It was only the one word that caught his attention.

"Pretty good." He said with a laugh. "How's your design work for Olympus going? I hear that you're making a new temple."

This was weird. More than weird, downright strange.

To make everything odder, a boy with tan skin and messy dark hair walked in, sword in hand. It quickly transformed into a pen, causing the Magnus guy to chuckle ... or maybe his necklace did?

"I can't believe it took that long to slay a dragon." The newcomer said with a sigh. "So, Annabeth, this is the cousin of yours that you've been talking about?"

"Percy Jackson, meet Magnus Chase, son of Frey and undead ghost warrior of Odin."

Well, Alec thought with a smile, there went his normal life.
